Park Kwang-Jin

For more than five decades, Park Kwang-Jin (b. 1935, Seoul) has pursued an independent vision of modern painting. While many of his Korean contemporaries embraced the monochrome abstraction of Dansaekhwa, Park developed a parallel modernism rooted in the natural world. As a founding member of the Mokwoohoe (Figurative Art) movement in 1958, he helped champion academic realism and naturalism as vital counterweights to modern abstraction. His signature vertical lines, introduced in the 1990s, move across the landscape like notations of sound or traces of wind, making nature something not simply seen, but experienced. Spanning works from 1986 to 2025, Seeker of Nature, Park's first major U.S. solo exhibition, reveals an artist whose commitment to place, perception, and renewal feels especially resonant today: at 91, Park continues to paint, experiment, and reconsider how we see the world around us.
